INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fiched product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.

2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.

3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.

4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.

5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

“How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?”

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

“Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?”

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

Le processus de reconnaissance du statut de réfugié au sens de la Convention de Genève, tel qu'il est énoncé dans la Loi sur l'immigration, sert à déterminer si les personnes qui revendiquent ce statut y ont effectivement droit et peuvent bénéficier de la protection accordée aux réfugiés au sens de la Convention. Ce processus s'est avéré inadéquat, tant au point de vue juridique que pratique. Dans ce bulletin, on examine les mécanismes en vigueur actuellement et le projet de réforme contenu dans la loi C-55
déposé en mai 1987.

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back.
Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

The 14;20 chromosome translocation in cattle : final report

By Sheila M. Schmutz. Regina : Agriculture Development Branch, 1994. 11 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 95-03038 (1 fiche)

Superovulation and embryo collection were used to study the effect of the 14;20 Robertsonian translocation on fertility and embryo viability. Chromosome analysis was successfully completed on 77 of the 279 embryos fixed for such analysis. A total of 419 embryos were collected over nine flush dates from 23 different cows, including four with the translocation. Two bulls with the translocation were studied by using their semen in artificial insemination of cows with normal chromosomes. This report provides the results of the project. AG LS MS PR SC

The 1987 report of the Johnstone Strait commercial net catch verification program

By Jim Lettice and Al Gould. Nanaimo, BC : Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans, South Coast Division, 1988. vi, 45 p. (Canadian manuscript report of fisheries and aquatic sciences / Canada. Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans ; no. 2003 ISSN 0706-6473) CCG-P no. Fs97-4/2003E MICROLOG 95-03200 (1 fiche)

Sales receipt data from the 1987 Johnstone Strait pink and sockeye commercial net fishery were processed mid-season to verify catch and to project final catch for target and incidental species. This report summarizes the activities of the 1987 Johnstone Strait commercial net catch verification program. Electronic data processing procedures and results are presented, and two methods of in-season catch estimation (Johnstone Strait vs Department of Fisheries and Oceans Hails) are compared. The in-season estimates were also compared with the post-season catch estimates from the Pacific Region Catch Reporting system. The report describes the various methods for projecting final catch from incomplete data, emphasizing veracity in reporting; the roles of fisheries officers, biological management, and industry personnel; and legislation governing the reporting of catch from commercial salmon harvest. The Fisheries Resource Conservation Council attempts to take a comprehensive approach to the conservation and management of our fisheries resources through a better understanding of fisheries ecosystems including the interaction of fish with other species, predator-prey relationships, and also changes in the marine environment such as ocean currents, water temperature and salinity. This report provides recommendations related to scientific priorities, predator-prey relationships, foreign overfishing and conservation measures. It then provides stock-by-stock recommendations by region (Labrador, Newfoundland shelf, Grand Banks; Gulf of St. Lawrence; Scotian shelf, Bay of Fundy, and Georges Bank) for main species, including cod, haddock, pollock, redfish, plaice, flounder, halibut, hake, flatfishes, and grenadier. Subcommittee reports are provided and public consultations are described. AP CA CF FI ND SC ST

Acadian Peninsula industrial park study : final report

Prepared by Flander-Good Associates Ltd. ; in association with Group Roy Consultants Ltd. Fredericton : Dept. of Economic Development and Tourism ; Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, 1993. 153 p. : Maps MICROLOG 95-02689 (2 fiche)

This report documents the findings and conclusions of the Acadian Peninsula Industrial Park Study, conducted in two phases. Phase I reviewed the existing and potential demand for industrial park land in the Acadian Peninsula Region and assessed the strengths and weaknesses of the existing parks in meeting the demand, including evaluating the need for and potential viability of a regional industrial park serving the entire Acadian Peninsula. After deciding that a regional industrial park was not a viable means of meeting the industrial infrastructure needs of the Acadian Peninsula communities at this time, Phase II identified the infrastructure requirements of each of the existing industrial parks over the next five years and provided recommendations on the nature of the human and financial resources requirements appropriate to develop, market, and operate them. ### Accélération du calcul des fonctions, objectif pour les problèmes de tournées de véhicules avec fenêtres de temps

L'exploration d'un espace de recherche à l'aide de techniques heuristiques fait souvent appel à des schémas de recherche locale. Ainsi, un voisinage de la solution courante est généré à l'aide d'un certain type de transformations, et la meilleure solution dans ce voisinage est retenue comme nouvelle solution courante. Cette procédure est répétée jusqu'à ce qu'un optimum local soit atteint. Pour de nombreux problèmes combinatoires, l'évaluation des solutions dans le voisinage de la solution courante implique de nombreux calculs. Dans cet article, nous montrons que le maintien de certaines données pertinentes sur l'état de la solution courante, que nous appelons "accélérateurs", permet de réduire considérablement les temps de calcul. L'application retenue afin d'illustrer ce principe est le problème de tournées de véhicules avec fenêtres de temps.

The Access to Information Act and its companion legislation, the Privacy Act came into force on Canada Day, 1983. While 10 years is a modest milestone in the life of any legislation, it is an appropriate occasion on which to reflect upon the Act and how it has affected legal, social and administrative landscapes in Canada. A number of questions emerge in this process. How did the Act come into being? How has it functioned? Who has used the Act and to what ends? Have we come any closer to prying open the iron gates of administrative secrecy? This brief document attempts to answer these questions, as well as to raise a few about what may lie ahead on the information highway.

The Access to Information Act is now more than a decade old. Conceived in the late 1970s, drafted and passed into law in the early 1980s, the Act was quite radical in its impact. It created an enforceable right of access for Canadians, subject to limited and specific exceptions, and provided for an appeal process for refusal of access independent of government, first to an information commissioner and then to the federal court. This document presents options and approaches for amendment of the access legislation which will help assure that it remains an important cornerstone of national policy as the country positions itself for the information age.

In recent years, the Variational Inequality framework has been recognized as a powerful modelling tool in operations research and economics, whenever equilibrium relationships among several agents occur. This interest has prompted researchers to develop efficient algorithms for solving Variational inequalities in finite dimensional spaces. This paper assesses the advantages and possible drawbacks of Variational Inequality formulations, focusing on oligopoly models, traffic assignment, bilevel programming, and multicriterion equilibrium. Each topic is analyzed from the modelling and computational points of view. In particular, the paper assesses led to a better understanding of their inner structure and to efficient solution algorithms.

This report presents the results of 14 weekly aerial surveys for waterfowl and gulls flown over the Fraser River estuary between mid-October 1992 and mid-January 1993. The data are compared to those summarized for 1966-74, 1982-83, 1983-84, and 1989-90. Comparisons with the mid-winter counts from the United States in the Pacific flyway were made also. The study is part of a program that assesses long-term trends in waterfowl populations, and incidentally gull populations, wintering in Boundary Bay and on the Fraser River foreshore, or collectively, the Fraser River estuary. The program was initiated in 1989-90 to measure populations at three-year intervals. This report documents the results of the second triennial survey conducted in 1992-93.

An Analytical method for locating a domestic waste water distribution field with reference to a pumping well in a sloping natural groundwater flow system

By M.M. Uddin and N.J. Anglin. Fredericton : Environmental Planning and Sciences Branch, 1994. 15 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-02700 (1 fiche)

In New Brunswick, it is common practice to place a waste water disposal field down gradient from the drinking water well to avoid contamination. However, contamination from the disposal field may result if the disposal field is not outside the capture zone associated with the pumping well. This study defines the capture zones by through an analytical approach that uses the principle of superposition with a uniform one-dimensional flow and a horizontal radial flow toward the well. It then defines a practical guideline to locate the disposal fields such that the contaminated water will not enter a single pumping well. The study provides a simple guideline to protect drinking water wells from such contamination based on assumptions concerning typical storativity and transmissivity values found in the fractured bedrock.

Application de la méthode de recherche avec tabous au tracé d'une ligne de métro

Par Hélène Dufourd. Montréal : Université de Montréal, Centre de recherche sur les transports, 1994. 129 p. : ill., Bibl. (Publication / Université de Montréal. Centre de recherche sur les transports ; no 94-61)
MICROLOG 95-02706 (2 fiche)

Ce document propose de déterminer la localisation des stations d'une ligne de métro à l'aide d'une métaheuristique : la méthode de recherche avec tabous. Sur un territoire donné, une exploration locale est effectuée, à partir d'une ligne de métro initiale préalablement dessinée. Des échanges sur les coordonnées sur lesquelles sont localisées les stations de la ligne sont permis, dans le but d'améliorer l'objectif recherché. La méthode de recherche avec tabous est utilisée pour structurer le déroulement de ces échanges, à l'aide de deux concepts : les mouvements tabous et les listes taboues, qui permettent une dégradation de l'objectif sans risque de cyclage. Le critère principalement considéré dans la composition de l'objectif est la population recouverte par la ligne de métro. À partir de territoires dont la population a été générée aléatoirement, des problèmes-tests sont résolus, en vue de trouver un ensemble de lignes de métro qui desservent le plus possible d'individus, tout en respectant des contraintes de distances minimale et maximale entre deux stations voisines l'une de l'autre.

Application of useable habitat assessments to adjust modeled estimates of the carrying capacity of trout streams

In this study, a capability model predicting maximum salmonid density in suitable habitat from fish size and total alkalinity was used to predict the abundance of westslope cutthroat trout and other sympatric salmonid species within discrete areas of the lower St. Mary River and its tributaries. Since the model only predicts fish abundance in suitable habitat, estimates of weighted useable area in the St. Mary and its tributaries were made to quantify suitable habitat and thereby the habitat capacity for trout. The study described the preferred habitat of westslope cutthroat trout based on measurements of depth, velocity, and bed material, determined useable area, and compared the probability of use frequencies with Bovee (1977); estimated the carrying capacity of discrete habitat units based on the model combined with estimates of useable area; and assessed the practicality of this procedure for broader application to assessments of habitat capacity in inland rivers.

In 1986, when federal housing programs returned to a policy of targeting exclusively low-income households, this was accompanied by an understanding that projects would be smaller and more widely dispersed. This change in delivery methodology was expected to effectively avoid the negative outcomes of the fully-targeted programs of earlier eras. This study explores changes in the size and locations of social housing projects and their locations, by comparing post'85 projects with those of earlier eras. Socio-economic conditions of the neighbourhoods containing recent projects and the proximity of those projects to various services are examined.

The Province of British Columbia wants to establish a world-scale liquefied natural gas (LNG) facility in the province. This information memorandum gives a concise overview of relevant information and assists potential investors in evaluating the attractiveness of B.C.'s investment climate and its potential as a site from which to export LNG. The document describes past LNG proposals; new natural gas opportunities from deregulation; market factors; gas supply as established by a number of Canadian and United States organizations; established and potential gas reserves in B.C.; transportation and marketing available; potential project description; and regulations.

Behaviour problems in the schools : a lesson in patience, tolerance and understanding

By Wendy E. Saleh. Mississauga, ON : The author, 1992. 17 p. Paper presented to the Ontario Educational Research Council. ON-TERIS ON06684 MICROLOG 95-02775 (1 fiche)

This report summarizes research undertaken in response to concerns about student discipline and behavior at the Dufferin Peel Roman Catholic Separate School Board. The report takes the point of view that such problems are a sign of student discomfort or distress, and that if the reasons behind the behavior are discovered and addressed, student attitudes and behavior may change. Recommendations offered in the report are based on surveys of Board teachers, staff and students, policies and procedures of this and other boards, and relevant literature.

Biodiversity of the Prince Rupert Forest Region, and, Biodiversity and forest management in the Prince Rupert Forest Region : a discussion paper

Victoria : Ministry of Forests, Research Program, 1994. x, 156 p. : ill., Bibl. (Land management report / British Columbia. Ministry of Forests ; no. 82 ISSN 0702-9861) ISBN 0-7726-2074-1

The Prince Rupert Forest Region occupies somewhat more than one-quarter of the land area of British Columbia and encompasses a broad spectrum of physiographic and climatic units. This project identified the major known components of terrestrial biological diversity and the major information gaps, emphasizing the ecosystem and species diversity in forested areas. To produce an ecosystem synopsis, the wildlife habitat classification was correlated with the biogeoclimatic ecosystem classification to facilitate future cross-referencing. Vascular plant diversity was not specifically examined other than for rare and endangered species. Vertebrates were documented within forested subzones and variants to identify species diversity, determine habitat affinities of species of interest, and develop possible management guilds and management indicator species for forestry management. The taxonomy, abundance, and distribution of both fungi and invertebrates in the region were also investigated. Marine and freshwater species were excluded.

Biological control of scentless chamomile : final report, work in Europe, 1991-94

Scentless chamomile was accidentally and purposely introduced into Canada about 100 years ago. Today, a triploid race occurs in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta that has spread into crop fields and pastures, causing significant reductions in yield of spring and winter wheat. There are currently no satisfactory means of control. Between 1991 and 1994, the biology and life history of four weevil species was studied, and the experimental host range of two species were investigated. Pending results of supplementary tests in 1994, it is expected that three species can be proposed for field release in Saskatchewan and elsewhere in Canada.

While the pollution of urbanized lakes and streams has historically been viewed as an acceptable trade-off of urban life, growing environmental sensitivities have focused attention on the social and economic value of such waterways, and there are increasing calls for water quality improvement. Biological markers are sensitive, cost effective tools for evaluating the risks of environmental contaminants. Mixed function oxygenase enzyme induction and acetylcholinesterase enzyme inhibition, an indicator for neurotoxicity, were evaluated in brown trout in the Virginia River and Rennie's Mill River, for which the City of St. John's, Newfoundland is a major watershed area. The B.C. Government recognizes the growth potential of the B.C. shellfish industry and is taking appropriate steps to clearly define coastal areas that are capable of sustaining shellfish culture. An initial step in evaluating site capability is the collection of biophysical information appropriate to the area that is to be assessed. This report presents an historical compilation of relevant water quality and beach survey data for Barkley Sound and Clayoquot Sound, off the west coast of Vancouver Island. Water quality data provides information on sampling site, station code and location, dates of summer and winter surveys, sampling methods, depth, temperature, and salinity. Beach surveys provide information on location and code, exposure, estimated slope, substrate composition, and water quality characteristics that most likely influence the beach during high tide periods.

Following the breaching of a dyke on the Englishman River estuary in 1979, surveys were begun to determine the distribution and abundance of birds using the estuary. The first surveys took place weekly from 17 June 1979 to 29 June 1980. A second survey was begun because of the controversy over a proposed development on the estuary in 1988. The surveys were conducted at least twice monthly from 3 November 1988 to 24 May 1989. After a large portion of the estuary was purchased in autumn 1992 by the Pacific Estuary Conservation Program, a preliminary investigation was conducted into the passerine use of the upland and forested habitats on the estuary from 8 July 1993 to 27 August 1993. This report documents bird use and numbers on the estuary near Parksville for the surveys in 1979-80 and 1988-89.

This report provides a profile of the local economy and the physical and community setting within the Boundary Forest District; and an assessment of the socio-economic and environmental implications within the Boundary TSA related to the various forecast harvest levels specified in the timber sup-

This paper presents bounding procedures based on classical relaxation approaches for solving multicommodity capacitated fixed charge network design problems. Several methods are compared on the basis of the relative strength of the relaxation and empirically by performing computational experiments on a large set of test problems. To assess more precisely the quality of the bounds generated by the various relaxations, feasible solutions are obtained via an heuristic based on the resource-decomposition principle. PR PS QU SC

The multicommodity location problem with balancing requirements is related to one of the major logistics issues faced by distribution and transportation companies, that of the management of a fleet of vehicles over a medium to long-term planning horizon. To solve this problem, the paper presents a branch-and-bound algorithm in which bounds are computed by a dual-ascend procedure. The paper emphasizes the design of efficient branching, fathoming and preprocessing rules. The algorithm was tested on a wide variety of randomly generated problems, and on a large-scale application to the planning of the land operations of a heterogeneous container fleet. PR PS QU SC

The west coast of Graham Island in the Queen Charlotte Islands supports over half a million breeding seabirds of 10 different species, over 90% of which is concentrated in the three large colonies on Langara, Frederick, and Hippa Islands. Surveys on the west coast of Graham Island were conducted in 1980, 1981, 1983, 1986, and 1988. The ancient murrelet colony on Langara Island was surveyed in 1981 and again in 1988 to determine population trends and evaluate the impact of introduced mammalian predators. Cox and Lucy Islands, which are adjacent to Langara Island and historically supported sizeable colonies, were explored in 1981 to determine their current status. This report provides the results of the surveys as well as precise descriptions of colony characteristics and suggestions on the logistics of working on colony islands.

The context for this study is the changing role of the multinational subsidiary in Canada. In the increasingly global business environment of the 1990s, the multinational subsidiary's role is shifting from addressing the needs of the Canadian market to identifying ways of adding value to the corporation worldwide. This report is in three main sections. Section 1 describes the initiative-level findings. An inductively derived typology of initiatives is presented, consisting of four case studies and some general comments. Section 2 describes the subsidiary-level findings and, specifically, the ways that initiatives link and develop over time. Section 3 addresses the public policy issues raised by the current study, and suggests avenues for future research in this regard.

The plan begins with some background on the province's mineral resources and related issues facing the B.C. mining industry, as well as a brief discussion of government and Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources priorities which directly affect Branch business. Based on the Branch's current mandate and a vision of their future role, several programs and initiatives are described. Finally, the business strategies to deliver these programs are discussed, with information on financial and human resources, marketing and communications, partnerships, and external review. MICROLOG 95-02732 (1 fiche)

To examine the relationship of parking and transit in achieving overall balanced transportation goals, this study focused on travel to work and downtown long-term parking supply and demand. The study reviewed the supply and demand for parking and transit in downtown Calgary and compared them to policies in Calgary and other selected cities; reviewed financial and taxation issues relating to downtown parking; compared park-and-ride as a downtown parking surrogate in Calgary and other selected cities; and determined strategic parking/transit policies. Recommendations are included. AL MU SC TR

This guide takes a detailed look at the GoPlan recommendations that form the Recommendation Scenario approved by City Council in June 1994. It describes how land use and changes in collective travel behaviour work alongside the road and transit networks that will be developed to support Calgary's future growth. The guide provides background information, an overview of the future vision of Calgary, how this vision was developed, and the recommendations to achieve this vision; lists the land use recommendations and corresponding future directions; looks at travel behaviour in terms of future trends and policies need to change how people travel; describes the future road network needed to support the city's future growth, including one option with river crossings and one without; and discusses the role of transit in the city and ways to encourage transit use. Appendices provide detailed maps and more specific information about road upgrades and travel behaviour parameters. AL MU SC TR

As part of Phase 4 of the Calgary GoPlan, two transportation network options were to be developed, one of which include no new river crossing, and one with some new river crossings. This report describes the background to the development of the two options and the evaluation process. It then summarizes the measurements for each of the 11 evaluation criteria for 1991 conditions, the two transportation options, and the What If? case and the 10 criteria for evaluating the two specific transportation system options; compares the two different options; and assesses their effectiveness in addressing the criteria of mobility, planning, healthy living, and cost affordability.

Calgary GoPlan : social role of transportation

Calgary (Alta.). Calgary, AB : The City, 1994. 25 p. MICROLOG 95-02679 (1 fiche)

GoPlan is developing a new transportation plan for the city of Calgary for the next 30 years. In Phase 1 public involvement, GoPlan identified a series of issues and goals that were important, one concern of which was the social role of transportation, including whether the transportation system should fulfill a basic role; whether it should be considered a commodity to provide for the movement of goods, services, and people; and to what degree it should meet the transportation demands of special users such as the elderly, those with low incomes, and those with disabilities. This paper outlines the policies and programs already in place through provincial and municipal governments and the private sector for those with low incomes, the elderly, and persons with disabilities. It also describes public involvement and summarizes stakeholders' comments. AL MU SC TR

Can the use of hand-held personal computers assist transition students to produce written work of excellent quality? Research paper

By Sharon Callan. Dundas, ON : The author, 1994. 25 p. : ill., Bibl. Presented to the Ontario Educational Research Council. ON-TERIS ON07384
MICROLOG 95-03140 (1 fiche)

In a study of twelve grade 9 destreamed students, all members of a TAGS (talented, able, gifted) group and all in French immersion, the students submitted the following work for comparison: hand generated work from the semester before the study began; work generated on palmtop computers; work generated on palmtops and edited on home or school computers; and work from two timed writing experiences, one done by hand and one generated on palmtops. The results revealed whether there were any differences in hand- and palmtop-generated work between the strongest and weakest students. Work of all the other students is described in terms of performance in spelling, structuring of sentences and paragraphs, and coherence. The teachers made recommendations regarding the availability of palmtops to students, their use by gifted students, and the need for a pilot study to investigate their use by learning disabled students. The results of the students' evaluation of palmtop use are also presented. Student skills observed include creative, critical, and logical thinking, and problem-solving and decision-making skills. The author draws conclusions on the benefits of small, powerful, portable computers for students attempting to achieve excellence. ED ON OR PR PS SS

This paper is intended to provide a general discussion of security issues pertinent to the Canadian Foreign Policy review, and to offer observations and suggestions in the hope that they will be of assistance to the special joint committee. The paper begins with an analysis of the concept of security itself, and how it should be interpreted for the specific purpose of making foreign policy decisions. It then provides a brief review of the principal features of Canadian security policy in the period after World War II, and of the changes that have recently occurred in relation to Canada's external security environment as a whole. This analysis is followed by a brief discussion of some of the broader policy implications of these changes, and of their significance for the general strategic choices currently confronting the makers of Canadian defence policy. Attention is then paid to Canada's security interests specifically in relation to Europe, the Western Hemisphere (including both the United States and the "other Americas"), and the North Pacific. The paper concludes with a section on the United Nations, collective security, and peacekeeping.

The state of practice (SOP) for pipeline design in areas where pipelines may move relative to the soil involves considering the pipeline to be made up of discrete segments and the segments to be coupled to the soil via a set of spring/sliders. There is little or no verification of the mechanisms or the magnitude of forces assumed during pipeline displacement. This paper describes an experimental model examination of displaced pipelines using the centrifuge modeling technique to create similitude between model and prototype or the actual situation. The SOP, the experimental program, and the results of eight pipeline model tests are presented. Results are discussed with particular reference to the magnitude of loads transmitted to the pipes and the development of the pipeline/soil interaction. Test results are compared with the loads that would be predicted by the SOP design calculations.

Participants were selected from existing mailing lists, client file information, and regional office contacts. Advertisements placed in the Winnipeg Free Press advised of the questionnaires, and about 75 responses were received. Over 400 responses, or 25%, were returned. This report assesses the responses, using statistical analyses, general observation, and summaries of major comments. Respondents were asked to rate both the Department's performance and the importance of the service. Summary data (median, mode) are presented for each question and for the importance that each responder placed on the subject matter of the question. The percentage of responses of "do not know" is shown for the performance and importance ratings of all questions. The data were analyzed to determine if differences existed between responses to questions and importance ratings among regions and among the different responder groups.

This report addresses overall energy use and energy end-uses in the commercial sector using a broad energy use analysis approximated from Statistics Canada and utility information from SaskPower and SaskEnergy. Energy end-use data for different types of buildings was collected in the first half of 1994. At the energy end-use level, the report uses telephone, mail-out, and on-site survey data to extrapolate an energy breakdown by end-use. Buildings are grouped by primary usage and size. Additional information is given on energy conservation practices, energy efficiency products, and sources of information on energy management. Information on lighting suppliers is presented as lighting was identified as the single most important energy end-use.

By Jamie Wiebe. Edmonton : Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission, 1994. iv, 23 p. : Bibl.

The approach to community mobile treatment grew out of Native leaders' recognition of both the devastating effects of alcohol and drug abuse and the need for programming to reflect and support Native culture and spiritual values. Very little documentation exists on past community mobile treatment projects or methods for implementing this approach. This paper highlights the mobile treatment experience to date and extracts from these past projects guidelines for implementation. The paper defines community mobile treatment; describes such projects as the O'Chiese Reserve, Calling Lake, and the Anahim Lake Reserve; describes implementation of the treatment and the factors affecting its success; and discusses ways of facilitating community mobile treatment.

This document is one in a series of briefs designed to provide an overview of the comparative impact of government on the competitive position of British Columbia's agriculture and food sectors. This paper compares the taxes paid by producers in British Columbia with those in other provinces and a few western states. While the aim of this brief is not to discuss the purpose of taxation, it is useful to put taxes in the correct perspective. Topics covered are: property taxes; fuel prices and taxes; and, conclusions and limitations.

This compendium lists those medicating ingredients permitted by Canadian regulation to be added to livestock feed. The document specifies the species of livestock, the level of medication, the directions for feeding, and the purpose for which each medicating ingredient may legally be used, as well as the brand of each medicating ingredient that is approved for use in Canada. For each medicating ingredient, information is given on the specifications to follow for each claim for which the ingredient is permitted to be used and the accepted compatibilities for that particular ingredient. A profile of the ingredient includes the drug's generic name, the approved brands of premix containing that ingredient, their respective levels of the ingredient, the physical form of feed in which the drug is approved for use, the species of livestock that may be fed the medicated feed, and the corresponding claim numbers.

A central aspect of Alberta's international thrust has been its focus on Asia which, by virtue of innovative activities and programs undertaken by the province, surpassed Europe in the late 1970's as an export market to become the province's largest export region after the United States. This paper focuses on the province's relationship with Asia. It explores the nature of its economic and other activities with the region, the possible reasons for the decline in this performance and competitiveness, and postulates the role that government may be in a position to play in reversing this decline.

Several base metal deposits, mainly zinc-lead and barium-strontium sulphate occurrences, are known in basal Windsor strata in three provinces in Atlantic Canada. This project reported on the geological features and the spatial and temporal distribution of the known base metal and barite/celestite occurrences in basal Windsor strata of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland. Sources of information included provincial assessment files, university theses, drill core in provincial core libraries, operators and owners of occurrences currently being explored or mined, former operators and owners, and published literature. The report describes the regional geologic and tectonic setting, the regional sedimentation history and correlation, and the sedimentation history of the Maritimes Basin. Case study descriptions of major mineral deposits in basal Windsor Group are given in detail by sub-basin, along with a palynological study of 17 samples from Cape Breton and Newfoundland.

La section III dresse pour sa part, un portrait détaillé de la distribution de l'avifaune dans les boisés de ferme en s'attardant sur chacune des principales caractéristiques tant physiques que biotiques pouvant influencer ou régir l'utilisation de ceux-ci par les oiseaux tout au long de leur cycle vital annuel. La quatrième section présente quant à elle, une synthèse des connaissances actuelles. Celles-ci sont ici considérées à des fins de conservation et dans l'optique de la publication éventuelle d'un guide de conservation des îlots boisés en milieu agricole. En plus d'une section intitulée "Littérature citée et autres références" (Section V) qui accompagne ce texte, nous avons également inclus en annexe au rapport une bibliographie annotée des principaux travaux scientifiques publiés sur le sujet. This report proposes two different approaches for choosing the LD50 truly representative of birds that can be used with confidence in risk assessment calculations of pesticides. The favoured procedure entails testing several species in a battery approach to derive a distribution of sensitivities, and the second-best approach applies empirically determined species-specific safety factors to standard LD50s obtained for one or two species to approximate the same distribution of sensitivities. The document also examines the question of the 'representativeness' of the various test species through the analysis of available acute avian oral toxicity data for cholinesterase-inhibiting insecticides. Data collated for analysis consists of 608 acute oral toxicity values covering 100 cholinesterase-inhibiting substances and 48 species of birds.

Fouling of tube surfaces in a CANDU steam generator is analyzed using a mathematical model and is shown to account for a major portion of the observed reactor inlet header temperature (RIHT) rise. A detailed heat transfer model is made to account for tube wall temperature at every point along a tube, then the solubility of magnetite is calculated at that wall temperature to check for primary side fouling. Once fouling can occur by magnetite crystal growth on the wall, the rate of fouling is determined by the mass transfer of dissolved iron from the water to the tube surface. The heavy water outlet temperature rise is followed through time and a detailed prediction of deposit weight profiles expected in the tubes is made. The inlet dissolved iron concentration to the boiler is calculated by using a simple flow-assisted corrosion model of outlet feeders.

These include the Prize Collecting Travelling Salesman problem (PTSP), the Selective Travelling Salesman problem (STSP), and the Generalized Travelling Salesman problem (GTSP). The paper describes the model and several classes of valid constraints, presents the heuristic and an exact branch and cut algorithm, and gives extensive computational results.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency LC50 test currently provides the endpoints that drive the risk assessment process in a number of countries, including the U.S., because the test is thought to be most representative of exposure conditions in the wild. This paper argues that reliance on the LC50 test as a meaningful endpoint in the risk assessment process is misguided and that the test does not offer useful information, at least for several large classes of insecticides most likely to result in wildlife poisoning incidents. It also considers the test inherently unreliable in that the exact conditions have an inordinate impact on the test endpoints; that the LC50 values obtained are not meaningful per se and appear to be at odds with the available field evidence; and that the test offers little or no insight that would make it worthwhile. Data from tests conducted with mallards and bobwhites using organophosphorus and carbamate insecticides was used as well as the work of Hill and Camardese (1986) on Cornulix.

The essential principle behind the crop planning process is that a forest planner must be able to identify the effect of silviculture on the flow of products obtained from the forest. To do this efficiently, planning has to be done at both the forest level and at the forest unit level. FORMANCP, developed as a forest level crop planning tool, graphically displays selected simulation results, has detailed short reports, and calculates forest level present net worth statistics. CROPLAN is a Lotus 1-2-3 spreadsheet designed for forest unit level analysis. This tutorial illustrates the most frequently used spreadsheet commands, giving a detailed description of CROPLAN and the additional features of FORMANCP. A simple example, using the Port Arthur Crown Management Unit, is developed from the data preparation stage through data entry to the stage where the first FORMANCP files are printed.

Development of a landscape ecological model for management on Ontario forests, phase 2 : extension over an east-west gradient over the province

This report describes the work accomplished under Phase 2 of a project to develop and apply a landscape ecological model to aid in the understanding and management of Ontario forest ecosystems. The first year concentrated on the initial development and testing of a data and simulation system to predict and understand forest productivity and water cycling for a test area in the Temagami District of Ontario. The second year's efforts further extended and developed the landscape model for three additional ecosystems along a significant east-west gradient across the province. The sites were chosen to provide both a broad geographic range in location and biome and a set of comprehensive measurements of forest productivity and hydrology for model diagnosis and validation. The three areas incorporated into the east-west gradient are the Petawawa National Forest Institute near Pembroke, the Turkey Lakes Experimental Watershed north of Sault Ste. Marie, and the area around Rinker Lake, north of Thunder Bay. Modifications and improvements were implemented in the digital terrain analysis methods, in the user interface, and in specific process modules.

In 1991, a spatial forest database over large regions of Ontario was initiated as the basis for research into forest fragmentation and biodiversity using data generated from the digital analysis of LANDSAT thematic mapper satellite data integrated into a geographic information system (GIS). The project was later extended into the eastern segment of the Boreal forest system. This report describes preparation of the spatial forest data base over the eastern Boreal Forest Region that extends from the northern boundary of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Forest Region and the southern margin of the James Bay Lowland, between the Ontario-Quebec border and a point west of Michipicoten on Lake Superior. The report describes the methodology used to produce the data base and results, including mapping of water, dense and sparse conifer forest, mixed forest, dense and sparse deciduous forest, poorly vegetated areas, recent cutovers of less than 10 years, old cutovers and burns, recent burns of less than 10 years, wetlands, bedrock outcrops, agriculture, built-up areas, and mine tailings.

Differences in problem-solving processes used by moderately and highly effective principals

This report examines the role of principals in schools according to a number of studies, presenting an image of the principal as problem solver and stating that what principals do depends on what principals think. The study explains that an administrator's world is contingent, and that dealing with it effectively involves solution creation as well as choice making. The report seeks to help principals acquire effective problem-solving processes, and identifies two types of principals: moderately effective principals, whose goals are narrowly defined by managerial and/or staff interpersonal concerns; and highly effective principals, whose goals are directly linked to student growth. Problem-solving processes of 12 novice administrators and 13 more experienced ones are compared. Results are presented from the first set of interviews used to determine principals' effectiveness. Quotations are included from interviews with both types of principals and conclusions are provided.

Educated dissent : the educational opinions of educators, nurses and engineers

By Mark Holmes. Toronto : Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1992. 43 p. : Bibl. ON-TERIS ON06485
MICROLOG 95-02764 (1 fiche)

Using sample groups of chief education officers (CEOs), educators (principals and teachers), nurses and engineers, and a control group from an earlier phase of this research, this report attempts to compare the often competing and incompatible goals for education with the needs of a public education system in an increasingly pluralist society. The investigator gathered opinions from sample groups through two mailed questionnaires on public policy issues, educational philosophies and testing, school policies and accountability, educational choice and independent schools, religion, controversial programs, minority schools and secondary school structure, and political (funding) issues. The report compares the characteristics of and findings for all groups, and summarizes general conclusions under the concepts of: leadership of the CEO, teacher professionalism, and policy for the delivery of publicly-funded education. Statistical tables are included.

Effect of divorce on wills

Edmonton : Alberta Law Reform Institute, 1994. vi, 34 p. : Bibl. (Report / Alberta Law Reform Institute ; no. 72 ISSN 0317-1604) ISBN 0-8886-4194-X MICROLOG 95-02601 (1 fiche)

In Alberta, divorce has no effect on a will made during marriage. If a person has made a will that leaves everything to their spouse, the will is not automatically revoked or otherwise affected by a subsequent divorce. In many Canadian and foreign jurisdictions the result would be different. Although the details vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, the relevant legislation generally says that divorce automatically revokes gifts in a will to a former spouse, unless it clearly appears from the will that the gift was intended to survive the divorce.

Effect of integration on the self-perceptions and activity levels of learning disabled children into regular classrooms

By John A. Hay. Hamilton, ON : The author, 1992. 2 p. Paper presented to the Ontario Educational Research Council. ONTERIS ON06678 MICROLOG 95-02776 (1 fiche)

A study investigated whether the integration of learning disabled children into regular classrooms, with adjunctive support, benefits such children in their self-perceptions of adequacy, predilections regarding physical activity, or actual levels of physical activity. Fifteen learning disabled students in grades 4 to 8 from two schools were compared to 492 non-learning-disabled peers, using the Children's Self-Perception of Adequacy In and Predilection for Physical Activity scale, a participation questionnaire, and a teacher evaluation form. The results showed the differences between learning disabled and non-learning-disabled children in terms of test scores, motor proficiency, the benefits of integration with adjunctive support, and the appropriateness of adjunctive support for clumsy learning-disabled children.

The Effect of textual saliency on learning from school texts

By Suzanne Hidi and William Baird. Toronto : Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 1986. 46 p. : Bibl. (OISE project / Ontario Institute for Studies in Education ; 84-1021) ONTERIS ON07114 MICROLOG 95-02769 (1 fiche)

This study examined the relationship between informative and interesting textbook content and how it affects students' learning from the text. Research has identified understanding of how interestingness can be manipulated to facilitate recall from expository text. The study re-analyzes previous data to identify different types of interestingness in description and the prevalent pattern of recall typical of elementary school students. The study constructs three versions of a single text and manipulates the text strategies for evoking interest to discover more effective strategies than those now in use. Student data show the differences in recall performance between high school readers and elementary school readers. The likely reason for these differences is suggested. Appendices include three published articles related to identifying different types of interestingness.

A project was initiated to describe the nature of principals' problem-solving, including types of problems faced, components in the problem-solving process, and classification of problems; to determine the differences in problem-solving processes depending on characteristics and context of the problem and characteristics of the solver; to develop instructional interventions for improving principals' problem-solving skills; to assess the effects of such instructional interventions; and to identify implications for the pre-service and in-service education of principals. This report describes activities in the first year of the project to address the second objective, involving two interviews of highly effective and moderately effective elementary school principals. In these interviews, they responded to a set of hypothetical problems and answered questions about these problems and about aspects of the problem-solving involved in their regular work. Appendices include materials from the two interviews.

Strip clearcutting in the tolerant hardwood stands of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence forest region of Ontario has resulted in excellent natural regeneration of yellow birch and sugar maple, but many of these stands are now overstocked. Research elsewhere has shown that thinning can increase diameter growth and thereby shorten rotation length. In 1986, a project was begun to evaluate the growth response of yellow birch and sugar maple saplings to thinning in a stand representative of conditions in the tolerant hardwood working group in Ontario. This report presents the five-year results of the crop tree release and compares them with those of similar thinning operations in eastern Canada and the United States. Recommendations are included. ### Effects of introduced rats on nesting seabirds of Haida Gwaii

In Haida Gwaii (Queen Charlotte Islands), rats have been found on five islands that support breeding populations of seabirds. All of the affected islands have supported some type of intensive human activity and the rats were probably introduced accidentally during those operations. This study examined the detrimental effects of introduced rats on seabirds nesting on Langara and Kunghit Islands. The study on Langara Island was a first step in evaluating the feasibility of a rat eradication program. The study reassessed the status of the ancient murrelet on the island in relation to rat predation and described the diversity of native forest birds and mammals on the island to insure their consideration during planning for rat eradication and to provide baseline estimates against which populations post rat eradication could be measured. The study on Kunghit Island examined the effects of rats on burrow-nesting alcids and determined if rats had spread to any of the small seabird islands surrounding Kunghit Island. BC CA LS ND SC

The Fundy Solid Waste Action Team (Fundy SWAT) was established by the Minister of the Environment to develop and implement a long-term strategy for managing the solid waste generated in the Fundy Region. A major component of the resulting strategy is the establishment of a containment landfill to replace the dumps presently in use in the region. Fundy SWAT identified 157 potential landfill sites using the Department of the Environment siting guidelines. The number of sites was reduced by looking at their size and location, adopting more restrictive siting criteria, looking at transportation and economic factors, conducting field investigations, and inferring soil and bedrock conditions. Le ministre de l'Environnement a mis sur pied la Fundy Solid Waste Action Team (Fundy SWAT) pour élaborer et appliquer une stratégie à long terme portant sur la gestion des déchets solides produits dans la région de Fundy. Une importante composante de cette stratégie concerne l'établissement d'un site d'enfouissement sanitaire pour remplacer les décharges qui desservent actuellement les résidents de la région. À partir des lignes directrices du Ministère sur le choix d'un emplacement, Fundy SWAT a déterminé 157 emplacements possibles. Pour réduire le nombre d'emplacements, il a fallu tenir compte de la superficie et de la localisation de chacun, adopter des critères de sélection plus stricts de même que prendre en considération des facteurs économiques et des facteurs liés au transport, des enquêtes effectuées sur le terrain et des conditions de sol et de soubassement rocheux existantes. Ce document présente une déclaration de révision générale relative à une proposition de Fundy Solid Waste Action Team visant à construire un site d'enfouissement sanitaire dans la région de Fundy.

In 1992, the Toronto Board of Education established its Conflict Resolution Program after a pilot phase. During the pilot phase and the first and second years of the program (1991-1994), the focus was on peer mediation, in which students in conflict meet with students trained in mediation skills and attempt to negotiate a solution. It was envisaged that each year the research would have a different focus and build on the research of the previous years. Questionnaires, focus groups, and interviews were used to evaluate the first and second years. The results made apparent the differences between both teachers and students in their perceptions of conflict and of successful conflict resolution. The Conflict Resolution Advisory team reached conclusions about the usefulness of peer mediation as part of the total skills and community development used in a supportive school development. Recommendations are made regarding expansion of the Program, specifically in the areas of school discipline/classroom management and the curriculum.

This evaluation provides a context for understanding the relationship among recent changes in Ontario mathematics curricula, the means available for assessing mathematics achievement, and the possibilities inherent in advancing technologies. The assessment of mathematics achievement has made advances in Ontario as a result of the Ministry's development of the Ontario Assessment Instrument Pool and the 2nd International Mathematics Study. The paper makes suggestions regarding the format of evaluation procedures used to determine the level of student competence, the use of computer-assisted testing and technology for the development of both instructional and evaluation materials, and the role of technology in determining the effective class size.

The Israeli firm Computras developed the Computer Jamboree computer software for use by Ontario children from kindergarten to grade 3. In an evaluation of Computer Jamboree, the objectives were to modify and adapt the software and support materials to meet the curriculum needs of Ontario K-3 students; to develop activities to support the Ontario curriculum; to develop training and support services for implementation of the software; and to evaluate and analyze the success of the software. The results indicate the motivational aspects of the software, the usefulness of the software in achieving curricular goals in adaptable ways in a number of domains, the learning opportunities provided by the software for students at different developmental levels, the preferences of different children for different software, the rates of progress of children in using the software, the use by students of the correction capability built into the software programs, and the enhancement of student social skills brought about by working in pairs and developing expertise. The views of teachers on the role of computers in relation to human contact and hands-on learning are also expressed.

This paper focuses on the significance of constructivism for mathematics education and the preparation of pre-service teachers for mathematics teaching at both elementary and secondary levels. It examines the question: In the short time that teacher candidates are with us, what have they come to understand of the nature of mathematics, and the implications of constructivism for teaching the subject? The paper presents an image of the pre-service teacher and discusses the use of manipulatives in mathematics teaching. The conclusion assesses the need for teachers to continue to explore connections among disciplines in an effort to see mathematics education more holistically. ED ON OR PR SS

Formative evaluation of phase 2 of SEVEC's Multicultural/Anti-racist Leadership Exchange Program for the period November 1991 to June 1992

MICROLOG 95-02757 (1 fiche)

This document reports on an evaluation of exchanges between high school students and their teachers in the SEVEC Multicultural/Anti-racist Leadership Exchange Program. It describes the preparation, use, and findings of two instruments: a survey assessing students' knowledge and skills related to Program objectives at the beginning and end of each set of exchanges, and a log kept by students of their learning processes during each exchange. Results demonstrate the changes exhibited by the students in the areas of leadership skills, use of language related to race and culture issues, and ability to identify some causes of prejudice. The report makes three recommendations for development of the Program in such areas as leadership skills, information acquisition, student activities and actions, and the number of Program objectives to be considered.

The Premier's Council in Support of Alberta Families was established in 1990 to advise the government on how its policies, programs, and services may impact on family life in Alberta. This report summarizes a forum on family issues that provided opportunities for Indian and Metis communities to collaborate on identifying issues of concern. Issues identified included recognition of Indian and Metis values and traditions; importance of Family Services being controlled by the community; and changes in the service delivery system to emphasize preventive measures and more opportunity for youth. The forum also discussed initiatives within the Native community and methods of coordination, cooperation, and communication. Detailed worksheets from the nine discussion groups are included, along with the questions used to focus the discussion.

Every five years, each holder of forest licences must submit a detailed wood and habitat supply analysis for the license they manage; develop a sustainable management strategy that meets specific objectives; and submit a 25-year management plan. J.D. Irving Ltd. originally submitted a non-spatial analysis and a management strategy proposal for the Fundy License in May 1992, then developed an operationally feasible 25-year management plan based on the selected and approved strategy. Since the original submission, a detailed review of the Fundy license management plan proposal has been conducted and several modifications have been requested. This revision addresses all the changes requested, including mature mature coniferous forest habitat, stripcut harvest prescriptions, planting in preharvest hardwood stands, unblocked harvest candidate stands, potential harvest opening size violations, and adjustments to harvest prescriptions. The company also discusses the impacts of the changes, the reduced available harvest level, the impending harvested piece size reduction, the impact of the MCFH objectives, and the poor resolution of the present forest inventory information.

A study examined whether there was a difference in attitude towards mathematics between boys and girls in the elementary school system. Students in grades 3, 5, 6, and 8 from a school in Dufferin County, Ontario completed the attitude survey, an adaptation of an instrument used by the Ontario Ministry of Education in 1989. An additional purpose of the study was to teach a class of grade 5 and 6 students the Logical-Numerical Problem-solving Strategy and to determine whether knowing this strategy would have an effect on the students' ability to solve mathematics problems. Six students from the class were targeted at the beginning of the study to be followed more closely using growth strands to determine growth in the area of problem solving. All students completed pre- and post-tests. The results of the survey suggest differences in attitudes toward mathematics between girls and boys, demonstrate the effect of learning the Problem-solving Strategy, and indicate the effectiveness of using growth strands to evaluate the process of solving problems.

The study documented the distribution and abundance of fish and habitat in the mainstream Athabasca River and three of its major tributaries in Jasper National Park; identified areas where large numbers of fish could be efficiently marked; recorded the locations of whitefish and bull trout spawning areas; collected non-lethal ageing structures (scales) from mountain whitefish in three reaches of the Athabasca River; applied Northern River Basins Study tags to larger individuals; collected and preserved specimens for stable isotope and contaminant analyses; and collected ripe mountain whitefish for collection of fertilized eggs. Field studies were conducted in five representative intensive survey sites within Jasper National Park and five immediately downstream that previously were sampled in spring 1992. Inventories were also completed on the Miette, Snaring, and Snake Indian Rivers.

The Clustered Travelling Salesman problem is an extension of the classical Travelling Salesman problem, where the set of vertices is partitioned into clusters. The goal is to find the shortest tour in such a way that all vertices of each cluster are visited contiguously and the clusters are visited in a predefined order. This paper proposes a genetic algorithm to solve the problem. Computational results are reported on a set of Euclidean problems, and comparisons are provided with two other heuristics.

Concern for Marbled Murrelets has increased considerably during the last 10 years because of studies suggesting a close association of the birds with old growth forests. The birds were listed as a threatened species in 1990 because of their vulnerability to breeding habitat depletion, oil spills, and gill nets. To find out more about the species, a large scale survey of Vancouver Island was begun in spring 1991. The study assessed the presence or absence of Marbled Murrelet activity in several watersheds of the island and quantified the relative abundance of murrelets in selected coastal waters. This report presents the results of the survey along with the results of incidental surveys conducted in 1991 and 1992 in the Queen Charlotte Islands and on Vancouver Island.

These guidelines are a technical manual that offers guidance to engineers in the seismic evaluations of existing buildings. The guidelines identify the typical structural deficiencies observed in past earthquakes to lead to failure and falling of structural components and to partial or total collapse, with an attendant injury or loss of life. The guidelines present a set of questions in the form of evaluation statements that relate to various vulnerability areas in the structural system. If any potential life-hazards are identified, an appropriate detailed analysis is recommended, with acceptance criteria suggested for each element of concern. The methodology, which can be applied nation-wide to all existing buildings, covers both structural and non-structural elements and requires the review of construction documents, the general condition of the building, and calculations. The guidelines include checklists, diagrams, and sketches to guide the user.

How constructivism complements learning in language arts classrooms : its potential impact on teacher education

This paper focuses on how teachers construct their visions of teaching and the role their past experiences with learning and teaching play in such constructions. The major focus is the link between the individual child's construction of meaning and the contextual realities of the classroom. Teacher educators need to develop an understanding of the challenges that teachers and students face as they attempt to create active learning classrooms so that teachers can be better prepared to address the difficulties and struggles that are implicit in creating such classrooms. Real-life vignettes provide concrete examples of why teacher educators must reconsider current practices for preparing teachers.

How evaluation of whole language implementation motivated primary teachers to develop pupil literacy profiles

By Jane Whaling. Goderich, ON : The author, 1992. 5 p. On cover: Ontario Educational Research Council annual conference. ONTERIS ON07031 MICROLOG 95-02774 (1 fiche)

This report describes whole language learning at Our Lady of Peace School, following an integrated activity-based program in which students use language functionally and purposefully for their own needs. The author evaluated whole language applications and implementation of six primary teachers' methods of literacy instruction. She used teachers' input in the creation of a pupil profile to reflect and create an appropriate program for each primary level child, enabling the teachers to set goals for increased communication, documentation, and effective tracking of each child's progress. Teachers realized that receiving a summary of a child's literacy profile would allow them to discard ineffective methods, strategies, and tools, and to become more accountable to parents. A copy of each child's literacy profile was to be inserted in the child's Ontario Student Record. The literacy profile is expected to foster confidence in the whole language program in Ontario.

Identification and evaluation of aspen decay and stain in RMP and CTMP pulping

By Kenneth Hunt. Edmonton : Natural Resources Canada, Canadian Forest Service, Northern Forestry Centre ; Alberta Environmental Protection, Land & Forest Services, 1994. vi, 37 p. ISBN 0-662-22582-1 CCG-P no. Fo42-91/116-1994E MICROLOG 95-02691 (1 fiche)

This report focuses on the brightness, strength, peroxide consumption and energy requirement differences detected when chips with known decay volumes are refined in the RMP (refiner mechanical pulping), and CTMP (chemithermomechanical pulping) processes. The emphasis was placed on the RMP process as most of the mills presently using aspen for mechanical pulps are of the open discharge variety. The CTMP process was used to indicate the differences to be expected when using this process. The information obtained should, for the 1st time, allow mills to quantify the expected results when using a material containing a weighed or estimated amount of a known decay. In summary, the main objectives were to improve methods of identification and measurement of major decay and stain types of aspen wood, to determine the economic consequence of major decay and stain types of aspen, especially in the CTMP process, and to collect information and photographs for a proposed field manual of identification and measurement of decay and stain of aspen in Alberta.

In distinguishing themselves from Americans, Canadians have long used the language of metaphor to describe their society as a mosaic and the United States as a melting pot. To undertake this difficult challenge of comparing the cultural myths and realities of Canada and the United States, the C.D. Howe Institute drew on the expertise of two of Canada's most esteemed sociologists, Jeffrey G. Reitz and Raymond Breton, both of whom are professors of sociology at the University of Toronto. Their study, the result of an exhaustive review of the available public opinion data, helps bring a picture of Canadians and Americans into clearer focus. Topics covered are: Canadian beliefs about the mosaic and the melting pot; attitudes toward the retention of minority cultures; the extent of cultural retention; and prejudice and discrimination. CA CI EX SA SS ST

Impact of the Sir Winston Churchill Provincial Park causeway on the circulation of Lac La Biche

By R.A. Bothe, Franklin D. Davies and A. DeBoer. Edmonton : Alberta Environment, Water Resources Management Services, Technical Services Division, Hydrology Branch, 1990. xi, 57 p. : Maps, fold. maps
MICROLOG 95-02981 (1 fiche)

In 1964, an island in the eastern part of Lac La Biche was declared a provincial park and renamed as Sir Winston Churchill Island. In 1966, a causeway was constructed joining this island and another to a point on the mainland. There have been questions as to the change this causeway made to the circulation patterns of Lac La Biche and the impact such a change could have on the water quality and fisheries resources of the lake. This hydrologic study determined if the causeway to the park has altered the water circulation patterns in the lake by developing a computerized circulation model for the lake, computing the circulation patterns for both pre and post causeway conditions and denoting any changes, and computing the change in volume of water transferred into and out of the large bay near the Town of Lac La Biche. The currents were examined using the Three-Dimensional Model for Estuaries and Coastal Seas during storm events only.

Since World War II, agriculture has undergone a number of major changes. Associated with these has been a huge increase in the use of herbicides, with North America being the main market followed by western Europe. This paper reviews the literature to examine the extent to which wildlife living in terrestrial habitats has been affected by the use of agricultural herbicides. The paper reviews the environmental chemistry and fate of agricultural herbicides to establish the potential exposure of wildlife and other nontarget organisms in terrestrial farmland habitats and impacts on wildlife from direct toxicity. Secondary impacts through adverse modification of wildlife resources are addressed by reviewing effects on different taxonomic groups and on habitat composition, heterogeneity, and interspersed, and by reviewing field studies for wild mammals and birds. The paper also discusses the significance of findings to pesticide regulation, and the direction and need for research.

Significant changes in our approach to information technology and information skills instruction are required if we are to prepare our students for success in the future. This document focuses on the importance of access in an information society and the role of educators in ensuring that all students in Ontario have equitable access to information, information technologies, and information skills instruction. The document intends to provide guidance for the transformation of school resource centres into information centres that, in addition to performing the traditional functions of libraries, would be the nucleus of a school's information network and the window to the broad framework for change to give schools the flexibility to develop information systems and programs that serve their unique and changing needs, and to take advantage of new technologies and learning opportunities as they emerge. The document contains sections on: the changing environment; information literacy and lifelong learning; equity of access; school information centres; vision; from school libraries to school information centres; changing roles and responsibilities; and a framework for change. An appendix includes an invitation to all concerned to respond. CI ED ON OR PR SS

The purpose of this report is to assess the impact of new information technologies and new information management practices on open government in general, and the principles and application of the Access to Information Act in particular. This report first reviews the legal aspect of access to government information by reviewing the Access to Information Act and other relevant statutes such as the Copyright Act and the Archives Act. Next, it reviews current administrative practices within the federal government such as generating non-tax revenue, pricing practices and the establishment of "special operating agencies" that are likely to have an impact on access to government information. Third, the impact of new information technology on the way information is collected, stored and disseminated is examined with respect to how these developments are likely to affect access to government information. After reviewing legal, administrative and technological developments, the report then discusses the major issues related to the effective administration of the Access to Information Act during the 1990s. Where appropriate, the document recommends amendments to the Act or administrative practices that will ensure that the basic principles of the Act are maintained.

The Informational and professional development needs of instructional assistants in the Halton Board of Education

Instructional assistants, or non-certified persons working under supervision of a professional, are being increasingly hired by school boards due to limited staff resources and funding in meeting the needs of special education programs. A study investigated the variety of duties carried out by those instructional assistants in the Halton Board of Education working with special needs students, determined the in-service needs of instructional assistants working in Halton, and investigated what programs and handbooks have been developed for training of instructional assistants working in special education. Data were collected using a survey methodology, using a pilot tested questionnaire on a sample of 110 instructional assistants. The results indicated the specific professional and informational needs of elementary and secondary school assistants throughout the system. Based on these needs, a handbook was written to guide the professional growth of instructional assistants and is included in this document. Experts from the Halton regional staff evaluated the handbook and the results of the evaluation are presented.

Initial overview of literature on integrated children's service systems : resource paper

Edmonton : Commissioner of Services for Children, 1994. iii, 72 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-03182 (1 fiche)

In fall 1993, a Commissioner of Services for Children was appointed to redesign services for children and families provided by the Departments of Health, Education, Justice, and Family and Social Services. A major impetus for the action was the recommendations for improved coordination of children's services found in reports written in the past 10 years addressing children's services in Alberta. This report summarizes lessons learned across North America; report summarizes best practices in children's services across North America; provides an annotated bibliography on preventive services, services in health and mental health, child welfare, education, and juvenile justice, services for aboriginal children and families, models and structures of integration, and community development; and gives a summary of best practices on human service integration in the policy, management, and service domain.

Cette étude s'inscrit dans le contexte d'une redéfinition de la mission des filiales canadiennes d'entreprises multinationales. Le rapport se divise en trois parties. Dans la partie 1, nous exposons les conclusions auxquelles on en est arrivé au sujet des initiatives prises par les filiales. Elle renferme une typologie établie de manière inductive, prenant la forme de quatre études de cas et d'observations générales. La partie 2 est consacrée aux conclusions visant les filiales et, plus précisément, la manière dont leurs initiatives convergent et évoluent avec le temps. Dans la partie 3, nous traitons des questions de politique qui sont apparues au cours de l'étude et nous proposons des orientations pour les projets de recherche futurs sur le sujet.

Insider? Outsider? Teacher driven research

By Beverley Bailey and Mary L. Hess. Toronto : The authors, 1994. 18 p. : Bibl. ON-TERIS ON07395
MICROLOG 95-03135 (1 fiche)

This paper describes collaborative research between a classroom teacher and a member of a university faculty of education, and outlines different types of collaborative research discussed in the literature. The experiences of the two researchers as they worked together on three projects about teaching involved the teacher being the "insider" and the faculty member the "outsider." The paper discusses the position of the teacher in research in schools, institutional support for teacher-researchers and the institutional response to unwelcome research outcomes, the relationship between the researched and the researcher, and the source of the initiative. Conclusions are made with regard to the reasons for the success of the collaboration. A future project will reverse the roles of insider and outsider.

This report summarizes waste management and diversion activities practised by the paper fibre industry in Ontario; identifies the general barriers to greater diversion; and describes proposed action plans to overcome these barriers. The action plans are grouped under the themes of education and information, reduction and reuse, market and infrastructure development, and residue management. The implementation of these action plans and the role of the strategy team are also discussed.

It is one of five calibrated watershed studies in Canada that represent a range of climatic conditions, terrain sensitivities, and rates of atmospheric acidic deposition. This report presents the proceedings of a workshop on the study, covering programs and concepts in integrated monitoring and research; monitoring global change; research and monitoring in and around Kejimikujik National Park; monitoring and research of surface waters, lakes and streams, and forests and watersheds; and the organization and interpretation of Kejimikujik research station establishment. Summary reports are given on watershed studies in the Experimental Ponds Area of Newfoundland, the Integrated Forest Studies Cooperative in Vermont, and the Hume Lake acidification experiment in Norway. These examples along with a review of four Canadian examples of SDM, three in Ontario and one in Quebec, enabled conclusions to be drawn about the effectiveness of externally imposed SDM, the areas in which SDM should be applied, the need for specific SDM objectives, the effectiveness of SDM as a response to other (particularly budgetary) problems, and the role of SDM in collective bargaining. A group of board and teacher representatives discussed conclusions of the case studies and made recommendations regarding initiation of discussions with other education groups, exploration of other Ontario examples of SDM, and funding for further research on the issue.

The study identified the range of renewable energy and conventional electricity generation technologies that could be used to meet Saskatchewan's electricity needs over the next 20 years and beyond; estimated the size and scope of renewable and conventional fuel supplies and determined any constraints that would limit the use of these electricity supply options; for each fuel/technology option, estimated the cost in 1993 dollars of typical electrical generation capacity, and the cost of operating and decommissioning these facilities; and identified the emissions and other environmental burdens and impacts associated with each electric option over its full fuel-cycle from plant construction and fuel preparation to plant decommissioning.

As part of the move toward digital acquisition, compilation, and dissemination of geological information, the Ontario Geological Survey created a library of digital bedrock mapping symbols for outcrop-scale features. The library currently contains over 1,600 symbols that represent bedding, igneous layering, paleocurrents, foliations, compositional layering, cleavage, fractures, faults, veins, dykes and sills, axial surfaces, and a spectrum of lineations including fold axes, crenulations, intersections, boudins, elongation, mineral, slickenside, primary, and shattercones. The library provides a standard set of symbols that portray the maximum amount of information but retain the intuitive relationships between symbol classes. The digital files include "dxf" drawings of each of the figures, a "dxf" file corresponding to each symbol, and Autocad "shx" shape files.

This paper addresses the problem of locating a metro or rapid transit line. An alignment comprising a number of stations must be located. The objective is to maximize the total population covered by the alignment. A tabu search heuristic is developed and computational tests on randomly generated instances are presented. Sensitivity analyses are performed on a number of parameters used in the algorithm. PR PS QU SC TR

Longitudinal patterns in the duration of unemployment insurance claims in Canada -- Rev.

By Miles Corak. Ottawa : Statistics Canada, Analytical Studies Branch, 1992. 49 p. : Bibl. (Research paper series / Statistics Canada. Analytical Studies Branch ; no. 47) MICROLOG 95-03023 (1 fiche)

The purpose of this paper is to examine the hypothesis of occurrence dependence in the duration of unemployment insurance claims. This hypothesis suggests that the past occurrence of a spell of insured unemployment alters, in a structural way, the duration of future spells. Canadian administrative data that cover the period from mid 1971 to early 1990 are used. Descriptive statistics suggest that successive spells for an individual are on average longer in length, and formal tests strongly reject the null of no occurrence dependence. This suggests that an individual's labour force history may influence his or her future. CA CI DE LA SS ST

Winnipeg : International Institute for Sustainable Development, 1994. 52 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 1-895536-32-4
MICROLOG 95-03165 (1 fiche)

This book is about ideas for turning government budgets into more effective mechanisms of sustainable development. It contains highlights from 23 case studies of green budget reform across North America and Western Europe in the energy and automotive, agriculture, air and water pollution, waste management, and environment and development policy sectors. Each reform policy is briefly outlined, the main policy elements are described, and wider policy issues are discussed. Key lessons, results, and policy history are highlighted. Cases are sorted into classifications that highlight the revenue-generating nature of each policy package. The classifications are those of public expenditure instruments, budget neutral instruments, and revenue generating instruments.

Management options for the northern spotted owl in British Columbia

By Dave Dunbar and Ian Blackburn. Victoria : Canadian Spotted Owl Recovery Team, 1994. xlv, 180 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-02645 (3 fiche)

The northern spotted owl is closely associated with late successional and old-growth coniferous forests in western North America, most of which have been logged, leaving only widely distributed and highly fragmented small patches. In 1986, the northern spotted owl was designated as endangered and in 1990 a recovery team was established to provide a course of action to stabilize the current owl population and eventually lead to an improvement in the status of the species in Canada. This report describes recovery initiatives in the Canada and the United States; the biology of the northern spotted owl, including taxonomy, range and distribution, abundance, habitat requirements, and life history; the development of management options and the description of six options; a biological assessment of the options; and an overview of them in relation to recovery, other related land-use initiatives, other recovery efforts in North America, and biological diversity within ecosystems. This study investigates teacher voice as a promising, action-oriented concept in which teachers' classroom experience and knowledge can enhance teacher education and research. As a teacher and researcher, the author reviews his attempt to reclaim his personal voice in an academic world organized by (third person) written discourse and an imposed language of public scholarship. The author describes the construction processes of his own narrative now in comparison with his voice in an earlier academic paper (the personal and critical voices) and reflects on the search for more symmetry in communication between his personal and critical voices. He argues that self-reflexive and reflective writing can complement formal writing in teacher education and development.

Researched by Robinson Consulting & Associates Ltd. Victoria : Ministry of Forests, Economics & Trade Branch, 1995. vi, 79 p.
MICROLOG 95-03052 (1 fiche)

The British Columbia Forest Service is conducting a provincial timber supply review to determine allowable annual cut (AAC) levels. The review examines the availability of timber, now and in the future. This report provides a profile of the Merritt timber supply area (TSA) communities, physical environment, and land use issues. From this baseline, the implications of three harvest scenarios are assessed, including those involving the provincial economy, the community, First Nations, and the environment.

The British Columbia Forest Service is reviewing the timber supply in all timber supply areas (TSAs) and tree farm licence areas to identify the economic, environmental, and social consequences of existing forest management practices and provide information to make the necessary adjustments to the allowable annual cuts for the next five years. This discussion paper summarizes the technical reports from the timber supply review in the Merritt timber supply area. It describes the Merritt TSA, current management practices, timber supply forecasts and critical factors, and environmental and socio-economic implications.

Metallogeny and lithochemistry of the southern Tobique Zone, York County, New Brunswick

By A.A. Ruitenberg. Fredericton : Dept. of Natural Resources and Energy, Minerals Resources Division, 1994. II, 19 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. (Geoscience report / New Brunswick. Mineral Resources Division ; 94-4 ISSN 0838-2565)
MICROLOG 95-02709 (1 fiche)

Results of a preliminary metallogenic and lithochemical investigation carried out over the southern Tobique Zone in the Millville area, about 50 km northwest of the City of Fredericton. The investigation concentrated on the geology and lithochemistry of the main base-metal-sulphide-bearing zones in the area. The geology in these zones was mapped and the available diamond-drill cores were logged. Representative rock samples of the major volcanic units were collected and analyzed for major, minor, and rare-earth elements to assist in the characterization of the depositional elements. The results of the investigation were compared with those of Wilson (1992) in the Riley Brook area of the northern Tobique Zone.

A study had the following objectives: to develop a model which makes use of simulation materials in the selection and promotion of personnel at the senior administrative levels of community colleges; to develop prototype simulation-type materials; and to test these materials through leadership development programs designed to assist personnel aspiring to promotion to a senior administrative position. The results led to the identification of skills needed by senior college administrators for success on the job, a model for use in the selection of such administrators, and the development of materials for use in their selection and training. An appendix includes case study problems used in the study, exercises, and score sheets.

As part of an ongoing program to investigate methods for fatigue crack detection based on modal analysis, contact and accounting monitoring methods were examined. Steel cantilever beams were subjected to repetitive strain stress. Periodic measurements with accelerometers, force transducers, and pressure microphones recorded both the frequency response and pressure transfer functions of the specimens to observe the changes in vibration and acoustic variables that occurred with the presence of a fatigue crack. Shifts in natural frequency, damping, and other parameters were documented as sample specimens were fatigued into cracking. The paper presents examples of the acoustic data and some of the experimental observations.

Analyses of changes in MRD500 forward bias current-voltage (I-V) characteristics, as a function of fission spectrum neutron fluence (reported as 1 MeV equivalent), are reported. Fission neutrons (1 MeV equivalent), 7.5 MeV (average energy) electrons, and 1.25 MeV (average energy) gamma rays are used to investigate the effectiveness of these radiations in producing displacement damage in the MRD500. The device physics responsible for the radiation-induced changes in the electrical characteristics of the diode is also discussed.

The Saskatchewan Provincial Timber Inventory system uses a combined-variable equation for calculating tree volumes, and taper functions for calculating log volumes. In the past few years, there have been concerns that the system might underestimate the volumes of small-sized trees. To address this, additional data were collected for small trees and refitting of the old taper function was initiated. This study screened all available data; chose new taper functions of potential usefulness for the 12 timber species in the province; fit these functions to the data; and, through analysis of their fit, selected the function or functions that provide the best fit and the most accurate volume estimates over the range of size classes present. The species used were white spruce, black spruce, jack pine, lodgepole pine, balsam fir, tamarack larch, trembling aspen, black poplar, white birch, green ash, Manitoba maple, and white elm.

Ms. Merry contacted the College of Physicians and Surgeons by telephone on March 19, 1992. She spoke to the College's senior investigator. According to the investigator's notes on file, Ms. Merry reported that her physician, Dr. Thomson, had prescribed Librium and Halcion for her, to the point that she had become addicted. She also reported that the doctor had made numerous visits to her home at night and on these occasions Dr. Thomson had made sexual advances and there had been physical contact. In telephone calls to the College, Ms. Merry also indicated that she had an audiotape of a conversation with the doctor and a record of flowers that she had received from him. This document presents the findings and recommendations regarding the Nikki Merry case.

The museum undertook a major reorganization early in 1993, identifying the need for a financial plan as essential to reduce its dependency on provincial government funding. A study was begun in 1994 to develop an overall strategy for earned revenue initiatives. Phase I of the study gathering background information, visits to selected sites, and public consultation. Phase II developed guiding principles and identified a program of activities and an approach for potential income generation. Phase III identified the implications (in terms of markets, staffing requirements, operating and capital costs, and other considerations) of all recommendations identified and developed a detailed plan for implementing and managing the plan based on established priorities. This report presents the findings, analysis, conclusions, and recommendations of the entire study. Appendices contain supporting data, including a market overview, lists of public submissions and comparable institutions consulted, attendance projections, sources of revenue, further details on retail operations, and a summary of the proposed policies guiding income generation.

By Yang Chen and Michael Florian. Montreal : Université de Montréal, Centre de recherche sur les transports, 1994. 24 p. : Bibl. (Publication / Université de Montréal. Centre de recherche sur les transports ; no. 94-56) MICROLOG 95-02801 (1 fiche)

This paper considers the problem of adjusting (or estimating) an origin-destination (O-D) matrix by using observed flows on the links of a congested traffic network, called DAP. A nonlinear bilevel programming formulation is proposed to model the DAP. The existence of solutions is proved under mild assumptions on the link cost functions and the property of the continuous dependence of equilibrium link flows on the demand is demonstrated under a weaker condition. By using the general bilevel programming theory, the DAP is reformulated as a single-level like optimization problem, where the marginal function of the lower level equilibrium problem is used explicitly in a constraint. The gradient function of the implicit marginal function is derived in terms of the link cost mapping and the link proportions in an equilibrium state. Necessary optimality conditions for the DAP are derived based on the gradient information of the marginal function, of which the significance and application for the DAP are discussed as well.

The Oldman River Dam Local Advisory Committee and the Municipal District of Pincher Creek No. 9 began the Phase I of a survey in 1985 to identify the effects of the construction of the Oldman River Dam on the population in the immediate area of the project. A list of landowners and legal descriptions of their land was collected; a study boundary was developed; and some demographic information on the landowners and their families was obtained. Landowners were asked how much of the land within each quadrant of the entire study area, before construction of the dam, was cultivated or pasture land. Phase II gives results of the 1985 survey and the repeat survey conducted in 1994, indicating changes that have occurred in the population; results of land use changes; a summary of comments from landowners who have remained in the study area regarding the impact of the dam on their daily life; a summary of comments from landowners who have moved out of the study area or the municipality of Pincher Creek as to why they left the area; and a summary of comments from landowners new to the area as to why they chose to own land within the reservoir study area. In 1990, the Federal/Provincial/Territorial Family Law Committee began a study to address widespread dissatisfaction with the determination of child support. A four-year program of research was begun to develop a formula that could be used to determine child support awards in cases of family breakdown. The research program was carried out in three phases. This summary highlights the methodology and key findings, including standards of living, average child support awards, and effects on lower and higher income families; the development and analysis of four formulas that involved income shares with reserve, flat percentages, surplus shares, and a revised fixed percentage; adjustment of the selected formula for low income situations; and changing the tax treatment of child support. The report also includes an overview of the research program to develop a Canadian child support formula.

Research has added to data collected in earlier research on the level of French language achievement of the first cohort to graduate from grade 8 in the Ottawa Board of Education's middle level French immersion program, initiated in 19895. This research paper specifically aims to compare achievement of the second program cohort and complete language lab testing, suspended by a teacher strike, of the first cohort. Language lab tests were administered to as many of the first cohort graduates as possible. The same lab tests and a test of oral and written French production were administered to two grade 8 classes from the second cohort. The paper describes the procedures, samples, French proficiency instruments, student background, and results of all measures. The results compare the achievements of the two cohorts in French proficiency.

L'objet de ce document est de présenter une discussion générale de diverses questions de sécurité internationale intrinsèques à l'examen de la politique étrangère canadienne, et de soumettre des observations et des suggestions dans l'espoir qu'elles seront utiles au Comité mixte spécial. Dans un premier temps, la notion de sécurité et la façon de l'interpréter dans le contexte de la prise de décision en politique étrangère sont analysées. Suit un bref examen des principales caractéristiques de la politique canadienne en matière de sécurité après la Seconde guerre mondiale, et des changements récents qui ont influé sur le contexte global de la sécurité du Canada. Ensuite, sont discutées brièvement les conséquences générales de ces changements internationaux au niveau des politiques et leur importance pour les décideurs de la politique de défense canadienne confrontés à faire des choix stratégiques. Les intérêts du Canada en matière de sécurité par rapport à l'Europe, à l'hémisphère occidental (y compris les États-Unis et les autres Amériques), et dans le Pacifique Nord sont ensuite abordés. ### Post-consumer plastic recycling : the Resource Plastics Inc. experience

By James T. Horn and Barry P. Wood. Toronto : Ministry of Environment and Energy, 1994. 27 p. ISBN 0-7778-2317-9 MICROLOG 95-02684 (1 fiche)

Resource Plastics Inc. was set up in 1990 following a feasibility study and was partly funded by the Ontario Government. The company focused on recycling of dry, clean, multi-resin or laminate materials, dirty, wet, single resin materials, and dirty, wet, commingled resin materials, categories representing untapped sources of potentially high-value plastics once recycled. In Phase 1 of the program, the company discovered by experience that it had acquired technology that could handle wastes in categories 1 and 2 but could not handle category 3 at all. The Phase 2, stage 1 retrofit of the company's plant added technology and processes that would permit handling a broader range of category 3 wastes. This report reviews each of Phase 1 and Phase 2, stage 1 project activities, including sourcing of recyclable plastic waste materials; collection mechanisms; determining and remedying deficiencies in post-consumer plastic recycling technologies acquired; market development activities; development of higher-value end products; and acquisition of skilled personnel and discussion of financial resources required.

Predicting school dropouts

By Claire Beauchemin. Sudbury, ON : The author, 1994. 6 p. : Bibl. ONTERIS ON07385 MICROLOG 95-03133 (1 fiche)

A project of the Metropolitan Toronto French-language School Council/Conseil des écoles françaises de la communauté urbaine de Toronto (CEFCUT) attempted to predict and help potential dropouts. To predict dropouts, CEFCUT used a questionnaire developed by the Quebec Ministry of Education called "L'école, ça m'intéresse?" (Does School Interest Me?). Use of this instrument was based on two modified versions of it developed as a result of a longitudinal study of 370 students in four northern Ontario French-language secondary schools. This paper outlines the northern Ontario project and gives reasons for CEFCUT's choice of a particular version of the questionnaire. The paper discusses the validity of the prediction made using this version with a sample of Toronto students and draws conclusions regarding follow-ups of the participating students and development of an adapted version of the questionnaire.

A project was conducted to describe the nature of principals' problem solving, including the types of problems faced, components of the problem-solving process, and their classification; to determine the differences in problem-solving processes depending on characteristics and context of the problem and characteristics of the solver; to develop instructional interventions for improving principals' problem-solving skills; to assess the effects of such instructional interventions; and to identify implications for the pre-service and in-service education of principals. The report describes activities in 1986/87 in which data collected in 1985/86 from 22 elementary principals led to the development of categories in interpretation, goals, principles, constraints, and solution processes that showed the differences between highly effective and moderately effective principals. Additional sub-sets of data from the original sample of 22 principals studied 11 principals as they planned for and reflected on their solutions to problem-solving in large and small groups, and produced case studies of various facets of problem-solving conducted with four principals.

In August 1994, the Alberta Government established a Professional Sport Policy Committee to determine if provincial government support, financial or otherwise, was necessary and warranted to attract and sustain major professional sport franchises in Alberta. As part of the study process, the Committee invited written submissions from major stakeholder organizations, agencies, and municipalities; requested Alberta Economic Development and Tourism to undertake an economic impact assessment of major professional sport franchises in Alberta; commissioned a public opinion survey to establish opinions about professional sports issues; met with representatives of professional sport franchises, McMahon Stadium Society officials, and the Mayor and senior officials from the City of Calgary and received written input from the City of Edmonton; and sought information from other jurisdictions regarding professional sport franchises and league operations. This report, along with technical documents, represents the results of the committee's undertakings and is intended to provide a general overview of the issues and the current socio-political environment. It also recommends a provincial government strategy to respond to future circumstances.

This report examines the 1991 Grade 12 Provincial Writing Review and the emphasis that was placed on the writing results at the board or school-by-school level. Examination of the review data indicates that other aspects of the results were equally important in helping practitioners, policy-makers, and the public to understand and improve students' writing performance. The report highlights some of the major findings, based on a further analysis of the Toronto School Board data extracted from the review database and pertinent Ministry reports, and explains the context from which the results were derived with respect to the proportion of English as a Second Language students participating in the review. The report also discusses other factors that seemed to bear some relationship to the writing results, along with what the review data reveal with regard to the intended curriculum versus the implemented curriculum. ### Queen Charlotte Timber Supply Area socio-economic analysis

By Mike Mullins and Sinclair Tedder. Victoria : Ministry of Forests, Economics & Trade Branch, 1994. xiv, 104 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 95-02649 (2 fiche)

The British Columbia Forest Service is conducting a provincial timber supply review to examine the amount of timber available for harvesting timber supply areas (TSAs) if current management practices continue. This report, one of four prepared for each of the TSAs, describes the economy, physical environment, and land use issues within the Queen Charlotte Islands, and the socio-economic and environmental implications of changing the current harvest level. The report focuses on the base timber harvesting forecast developed by the timber supply analysis but also examines the short-term implications of other harvesting forecasts. The report demonstrates a range of implications associated with different harvest levels following a multiple accounts approach that focuses on a range of values derives from the forest ecosystem. The report addresses employment and income, government revenues, community, environment, and First Nations. It also describes the environmental and socio-economic setting and current issues related to present forest management practices on the Island.

The Quesnel timber supply area (TSA) covers the northern part of the Cariboo Forest Region. As part of the provincial Timber Supply Review, the British Columbia Forest Service examined the availability of timber in the Quesnel TSA. The analysis assessed how current forest management practices affect the supply of wood available for harvesting over the next 250 years and examined the potential changes in timber supply stemming from uncertainties about forest growth and management actions. This report describes the area, discusses data preparation and formulation of assumptions; presents analysis methodology and results; and examines the sensitivity of the results to uncertainties in the data and assumptions used.

The Alberta Special Waste Treatment Centre (ASWTC), near the Town of Swan Hills, was constructed in 1987 to incinerate hazardous waste produced in the province. In 1992, Chem-Security (Alberta) Ltd. received approval to add an incinerator with an additional capacity. In 1993, the treatment centre was forbidden to accept wastes from other jurisdictions in Canada. Chem-Security now seeks approval to receive such wastes from other Canadian jurisdictions to utilize excess capacity and thereby reduce the contribution of Alberta taxpayers. This report describes the application and supporting information on the environmental and health effects of treatment centre emissions, transportation and transportation risk, and the socio-economic impact; the position of participants in the hearing, including competing services, individuals, public interest organizations, and governments; public policy, jurisdictional, and preliminary matters; project justification; economic, environmental, and socio-economic effects; and a summary of overall conclusions and a decision.

The author describes her personal response to Northrop Frye's writings, particularly The Educated Imagination, and relates the involuntary journey from a strong acceptance of his theories during postgraduate work on reader-response theory and its practice in the classroom to a re-education derived from teaching feminist literary criticism. The author defines what became a transformational perception of the significance of direct response to literary reading: that the context of literary response is just as important as the nature of literary response as defined in Frye's ideology.

In 1991 and 1992, there were a number of complaints about the scope of comprehensive waivers used by commercial recreational operators in British Columbia, as well as a renewed effort by the Canada West Ski Areas Association to enact a Ski Area Safety Act, inspired by United States legislation dealing with risk, liability, and safety in alpine skiing. The Law Reform Commission was asked to examine the law regarding the tort liability of operators of commercial recreational facilities and the use of comprehensive waivers, specifically those for conventional recreation skiing. This report focuses on tort liability for personal injury and death, and does not discuss property damage. The report gives an overview of civil liability in recreation; discusses problem areas such as the use of the Occupiers Liability Act for recreational premises and in relation to the skiing industry, restrictions on gratuitous use of land for recreational purposes, and the use of waivers; and suggests possible reform measures. Appendices include the Occupiers Liability Act, a draft Ski Area Safety Act, selected provisions of the Quebec Safety in Sports Act relating to alpine skiing, and examples of ski area operators' statutory duties under U.S. legislation by state.

While municipalities are no longer required to rely on SAMA's valuation service, the agency still has a role in supervising the administration of the assessment provisions of the municipal acts. The focus of this paper is to help local governments understand their role in ensuring accurate and fair property and business assessment bases should they choose to use an alternate assessment valuation service. While it is oriented towards those municipalities that are considering an alternate assessment valuation service, it does cover all major aspects of property and business assessment administration in Saskatchewan in an attempt to place the whole of assessment

The research methods included surveys, observation of CWCL activities, and interviews. CWCL is a model for integrating school and community by exposing students to workplaces and workers in the community around them. It aims to reduce the likelihood of students dropping out and to enhance career/work life preparation by reinforcing students' understanding of the relevance of school to their future, work, career, and life. This paper examines the impact of CWCL on students, their feelings about school and high school, the impact of dropping out, and related matters, and discusses the implementation of CWCL. Ce répertoire de données fournit des renseignements complémentaires sur les données élaborées pour le groupe d'étude. L'annexe du rapport présente un certain nombre de renseignements généraux sur les sources de données et sur les définitions. La première section donne un aperçu général en ce qui a trait aux données requises. La tâche consistait essentiellement à déterminer le nombre de particuliers et de familles qui dépendent de la pêche et le niveau du revenu gagné et des autres sources de revenu afin d'obtenir le revenu total provenant de toutes les sources. Le document expose également un certain nombre d'aspects conceptuels ainsi que les procédures de vérification des données afin d'expliquer les différences avec les autres données accessibles au public. Parmi les questions soulevées, nous citons notamment la fixation des prix du poisson de haute mer au débarquement, et les mesures de l'emploi (années-personnes) par rapport au nombre de contribuables tirant un revenu de la pêche. Un certain nombre de tableaux sont également inclus pour illustrer les points abordés dans le document.

Four Children's Training Centres (CTCs) were established in Nova Scotia in 1969 to allow children with moderate to severe mental handicaps to receive training and instruction in feeding, dressing, and toilet training so that they could eventually return to their homes or non-institutional settings. Two of the CTCs were closed by 1993 and the remaining two had problems. The CTC Review Committee was appointed in 1994 to examine the current functioning of the Dartmouth and Sydney CTCs and the options for community placement of residents in the course of pending closures. The report describes the major areas of concern; specific issues; and current clients. Appendices include a survey of parents and guardians of children who have moved from the Pictou, Digby, and Dartmouth CTCs since 1991, the background report prepared by the Roehrer Institute and a critique, and a framework for the review of CTCs.

A Review of winterkill remediation techniques for Alberta

By Karl Schwalm. Vegreville, AB : Alberta Environmental Centre, 1994. x, 84 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7732-1657-X
MICROLOG 95-03248 (1 fiche)

Alberta now has winterkill problems in more than 50 popular sport fishing lakes and hundreds of small farm ponds that have considerable potential for aquaculture. Artificial aeration is currently the most effective means of rehabilitating winterkill lakes and is conducted at 12-14 sport fishing lakes each year but the cost of applying existing practices to large winterkill lakes or to large numbers of smaller lakes would appear to be prohibitive. A literature review was conducted to identify improvements that could be made to existing aeration installations and to determine if promising cost-effective aeration techniques exist for large winterkill lakes. This report presents information on winter oxygen depletion and the associated fish mortality to identify the most profitable remediation measures. Promising aeration techniques were reviewed to assess their suitability for Alberta. Personnel operating selected aeration installations in other provinces and in some United States states were also consulted. Recommendations for management initiatives and future research opportunities were identified.

Les consortiums de technologie sont des alliances technologiques entre des entreprises, des universités et des gouvernements. Ils sont créés en vue de partager les coûts et les risques sans cesse croissants associés aux activités de recherche et de développement (R-D) fondamentales ou préconcurrentielles. Cette étude analyse le rôle des consortiums de R-D dans le développement des technologies. Nous avons principalement centré notre attention sur la croissance des consortiums de technologie aux États-Unis, la participation d'entreprises canadiennes à ces consortiums et les obstacles institutionnels à la participation canadienne aux alliances américaines de R-D.

Setting the course : a report to address fire service training in Nova Scotia

By Frederick G. Hollett. Halifax : Dept. of Labour, 1995. 45 p.
MICROLOG 95-03297 (1 fiche)

Report on the availability of firefighter training in Nova Scotia. Information was obtained through a series of scheduled meetings with fire fighters and a questionnaire sent to all fire departments. The report reviews the direction of fire service training in the 1990s, particularly as it relates to the volunteer or part-time firefighter, and describes the findings and concerns from scheduled meetings. These include responsibility for training programs; empowerment of agencies and mandate; the Nova Scotia Firefighter School's operations and the role of its Waverly facility; dissemination of information on training; the delivery of firefighter training; standards, accreditation and certification; career departments; private industry training agencies; and the number of organizations related to firefighting.

A Simulation study of HF direction finding in the presence of F-region scattering and sporadic-E

This report presents simulation studies modelling the operation of a sampled-aperture HF direction-finding (DF) system operating at high latitudes to obtain propagation models that are representative of high-latitude conditions, and to test various DF methods against those models to establish their utility. A model was developed for the scatter-supported ionosphere radio propagation, along with the sporadic-E propagation. The direction-finding operation is also modelled, including a two-dimensional array of antennas, and a direction-finding algorithm that obtains direction estimates from the signal samples received at the array elements. A plane-wave fitting algorithm that obtains a single direction corresponding to the best plane-wave fit to the received signal samples, and a MUSIC algorithm that is capable of obtaining a number of signal directions from a set of signal samples are modelled. DF system operation is simulated by running the model a number of times, with the scattering patch locations shifted a small amount each time, to simulate ionospheric drift motions. The resultant time histories of estimated bearing and elevation are examined to determine the appearance of the scattering and sporadic-E features, and the performance of the system. A particular set of simulations were used to study the time history of the observed signal directions from scattering, for various scattering-patch geometries and propagation parameters such as ionospheric electron density.

This report assesses what factors influence educators from the Northwest Territories to seek a principalship and enroll in formal pre-service certification programs sponsored by the Northwest Territories Department of Education. The study forms part of a broader inquiry into the professional socialization (both formal and informal) of aspiring principals, specifically in relation to the role of the principal as instructional leader. Specific research questions are: why did candidates decide to pursue a principalship; what influenced their decision to pursue training; and what influenced their decision to enroll in the Northwest Territories Principal Certification Program. Data were collated by means of pre-instructional questionnaires and interviews and journal entries during the program. The report groups data by four dimensions of a conceptual framework: internal processes (values, cognitive processes); relationships with superiors, peers, and subordinates; organizational and contextual factors; and image of the role. The results indicate which factors underlined responses to the various research questions. Statistical tables of findings are provided.

By the early 1990s, the total cost of health care in Canada had reached 10 percent of the country's gross domestic product, a share exceeded only by that of the United States. Thus, improving the efficiency of the Canadian health care sector is needed both to increase Canada's international competitiveness and to reduce the burden that health care costs impose on government finances. This brochure presents sound advice on health care reform in Canada. Topics covered are: why is health care different; market failure in health care; health care reform in Canada; and, the prospects for health care reform.

L'avènement de la nouvelle technologie de l'information et des nouvelles pratiques de gestion pertinentes fait que l'environnement de l'information détenue par l'administration fédérale a changé depuis l'entrée en vigueur de la Loi sur l'accès à l'information (en 1983). Ce rapport doit évaluer l'impact de la nouvelle technologie et des nouvelles pratiques de gestion de l'information sur le degré d'ouverture de l'administration gouvernementale en général, ainsi que sur les principes de la Loi sur l'accès à l'information et sur son application en particulier. La deuxième partie du rapport est une étude du cadre juridique de l'accès à l'information et des autres lois pertinentes, comme la Loi sur le droit d'auteur et la Loi sur les Archives nationales du Canada. La troisième a pour objet les pratiques administratives actuelles de l'administration fédérale, telles que la génération de recettes non fiscales, la politique de tarification et l'établissement d'organismes de services spéciaux, qui auront vraisemblablement un impact sur l'accès à l'information détenue par cette administration. La partie suivante analyse l'impact de la nouvelle technologie de l'information sur les façons de collecter, de conserver et de distribuer les renseignements, du point de vue des répercussions prévisibles de son évolution sur l'accès à l'information.

Zirconium (Zr) and titanium (Ti) are widely used in the nuclear and aerospace industries, yet little is known of the intrinsic vacancy defect properties of their lower temperature allotropic forms. The metals transform from hcp (a-) to bcc (b-) structures at 0.53 Tm (Zr) and 0.59 Tm (Ti), where Tm is the melting temperature. The relatively low temperature ranges available for study of the a-phases prevents any direct measurements of their equilibrium vacancy concentrations or their vacancy formation energies. The a-phase temperature limitations of Zr and Ti lead to the consideration of Hafnium (Hf) as a model for the study of a-phase defect properties, since Hf is the only other group IVA metal that transforms from an hcp to a bcc structure. This study examines the possibility of a determination of Cv(T) and hf by positron annihilation spectroscopy by measuring the equilibrium temperature dependence of the Doppler-broadened positron annihilation line-shape for A-Hf (6.8 at %Zr) in the temperature interval 298-1945 K.

For trade between Canada, the United States, and Mexico to expand, the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) recognized that selected individuals must be permitted access to the each other's countries to participate in business, trade, and investment activities, and to provide professional services and expertise. This guide is designed to assist U.S. and Mexican business persons in understanding the procedures for temporary entry to Canada. The interpretive notes reflect common understandings reached by the three NAFTA parties on the administration and implementation of Chapter 16 of the NAFTA as well as Canadian administrative practice. The guide covers those who qualify for entry under NAFTA; the advantages of entry; the categories of business person; places to apply; factors to consider; and other provisions of NAFTA that affect business travellers.

World demand for wood and wood products is forecast to increase markedly by 2010. In light of the expected decline in the allowable cut on public forest lands in British Columbia, non-industrial private forest land may be an important supply of timber for the B.C. forest sector in the future. If non-industrial private forests are to realize their potential as a source of wood for the forest industry, forest management on such land must improve. This report presents information on the forest management practices and demographic characteristics of owners of non-industrial private forests in B.C. and other jurisdictions. Possible improvements in government programs designed to enhance forest management on private lands are discussed.

The next few years will be a critical period for international trade despite the major achievements in 1993. The Uruguay Round agreement, between 117 General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) signatory nations, was reached in December 1993. It contains many new provisions that move toward harmonizing world trading and investment relationships. Yet many of the Uruguay Round's initial goals were not accomplished. This study seeks to illuminate the still unresolved issues of world trade. Its point of departure is the observation that economic theories concerning international trade have outrun world trading policies. Topics covered are: setting the stage; evolution and revolution in economic theory; features of the new international trade theory; the role of strategy; trade-enhancing national strategies; and, policy implications and future prospects.

The presence of fluid mud layers and very fine-grained mud deposits in marine navigable channels presents serious problems in determining the maximum navigable water depth. One definition of navigable depth, used increasingly in European ports, is the distance between the water surface and a density of 1.2 g/cc within the underlying sediment. This definition is inadequate because it is based on density rather than soil shear stiffness (shear modulus). This paper describes a laboratory experiment that employs shear wave velocity and X-ray bulk density measurements to determine shear modulus profiles in soft soils consolidating from a homogeneous slurry. The paper shows the importance of measuring shear modulus, in preference to seabed echoes or bulk density measurements, as a criterion for defining navigable depth.

La partie intitulée Conseil pour les présentateurs donne des suggestions et des idées pour la présentation de la matière. Cette section contient aussi des renseignements généraux provenant du Centre national d'information sur la violence dans la famille, une liste de ressources communautaires contre la violence et la négligence à l'égard des personnes âgées et un échantillon d'un affiche pour annoncer l'atelier. La deuxième section est le guide de la présentation. Cette section présente des renseignements de base, des conseils pour faire les présentations, des formules à utiliser pour traiter le sujet, un programme, les réponses à une petite interrogation, des suggestions d'activités, des documents de référence et des directives sur leur utilisation. ### Visions of the Future for Families in Alberta : non government organizations forum

Visions of the Future for Families in Alberta. Forum (1991 : Alberta). Edmonton : Premier's Council in Support of Alberta Families, 1991. 30 p. MICROLOG 95-03192 (1 fiche)

The forum was conducted to provide an opportunity for non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to give input on the themes identified at the Lieutenant-Governor's conference on Alberta families, held in February 1990. The focus was on developing a consensus on a future vision for families that would enhance family well-being. This report summarizes the input from all the discussion groups and the feedback received on comment forms from individual NGO representatives. The report gives an overview of the deliberations of discussion groups on cultural values, preventive services, work and leisure, coordination of services, responsiveness of systems, community support for families, and family economic security; describes the current climate of change; gives recommendations to the council; and discusses plans for the future. ### Water quality assessment of Cooks Creek, Manitoba, Canada

By C.E. Hughes, D.A. Williamson and B.M. Lusier. Winnipeg : Manitoba Environment ; Cooks Creek Conservation District No. 5, 1994. ix, 46 p. : ill., Bibl. (Water quality management report / Manitoba. Water Quality Management Section ; no. 94-09)

A five-year management plan developed by the Cooks Creek Conservation District included a program of routine surface water monitoring to establish the present state of knowledge about surface water in the District; the degree to which sediment in local surface waters is an impediment to water quality or use; whether local surface water is contaminated by extensive use of agricultural chemicals; if water users are impaired by local water quality; and if local water quality could be improved for other uses. This report describes data collected from the beginning of the study, in May 1990, to July 1993 and discusses the relationship between rainfall and stream flow, fecal coliform bacteria, dissolved minerals, suspended sediment, phosphorus, nitrogen, pH, dissolved oxygen, trace elements, and pesticides. MICROLOG 95-02782 (1 fiche)

A conference was held with the aim of providing bright students with the opportunity to develop an awareness of predicted future trends in a wide range of disciplines, and to explore strategies used by futurists in planning for the future. The conference report describes a model day-long Futures Conference for gifted grade 4-7 students from eastern Ontario and western Quebec in use since 1988. The report reviews the regional development of the conference model as well as the content, format, and organization of the conference; and summarizes the perceived benefits of the conference, workshop choices by male and female participants, and the role of the conference for gifted rural students.

This report investigates a simple in-phase/quadrature (I/Q) demodulator that can be used to measure the amplitude, phase, and instantaneous frequency of radar signals over a large bandwidth for electronic warfare applications. Imbalance errors and DC offsets are minimized by the techniques of component matching and calibration. A DFT technique is used to characterize the imbalances and DC offsets. Improved matching characteristics on practical bandwidth demodulators are also given.

Women in non-traditional occupations : educational strategies that work

This study examines obstacles preventing women from entering trades as an occupation and discusses educational strategies for encouraging and assisting women to enter male-dominated fields. The study selects various aspects of gender socialization as the focal barrier to entry into non-traditional occupations. Interviews with women working in trades and a literature search form the research base. Issues considered in the study include: gender socialization; lack of familiarity; math and science phobia; training opportunities; employment after training; and lack of social support. These issues are viewed as microcosms of the social context. The study also discusses the psychology of girls and women through the self-in-relation theory and calls for equal opportunity through social and educational change to eliminate barriers.

A recently completed, major evaluation of work sharing provides important new conclusions about the past effectiveness and future prospects for this program. The evaluation covers the two years 1989 and 1990. A strong research design, using a random comparison group design, compares the performance of the work sharing program with the alternative of laying off staff. A total of 1,080 firms and 2,070 employees of those firms were surveyed. Additional administrative data, and a range of qualitative data sources, were also brought to bear on the evaluation. Detailed econometric modelling was conducted at both the employee and firm level. Collectively, these lines of evidence and analyses provide an authoritative empirical review of the program.

In 1971, Canada and Germany signed a cooperative agreement to carry out research and development projects on the sulphur cycle, including sulphur transformation in atmosphere/plant, plant/soil, and soil/water. This document presents the proceedings of a workshop to provide a more complete understanding of sulphur transformation in soils and sulphur fluxes between soil and water as well as soil and air. Papers at the workshop critically reviewed analytical techniques for concentration and stable isotope determinations of different forms of sulphur in the pedosphere, biosphere, atmosphere, and hydrosphere; isotope tracer techniques; and fluxes of sulphur that occur during soil-atmosphere and soil-water interactions.

This report examines the effects of collaborative learning activities on the perception of self-efficacy of 37 high school student participants in a conference for able learners in need of creative writing enrichment. The pilot study methodology involved a seminar composed of three distinct groups in which the students read literary selections from the Junior Great Books Program and discussed them through an interpretive method known as Shared Inquiry. This was followed by a creative writing segment supplemented by author craft talks, writing tips and exercises, presentations by student writers, and participation in writing competitions. The study results are described in terms of the effect of enhancement of self-efficacy on proximal goals and performance attainment in the gifted learner, the extent of increases in self-efficacy experienced by the conference participants, and the degree of achievement of effects of increased motivation and intrinsic interest through the application of gains in self-efficacy. The study also discusses the application of self-efficacy theory and training practices to differentiated curricula for the gifted.

Writing to learn high school mathematics and conceptual growth

By Gordon Doctorow. North York, ON : The author, 1995. 16 p. : Bibl. ONTERIS ON07397

MICROLOG 95-03141 (1 fiche)

This paper presents an interpretive account of a study of the connection between conceptual growth in mathematics learning and the use of journal writing as a pedagogical vehicle. The focus is on the relationship between dialogic journal writing and Vygotsky's notion of cognitive growth toward real conceptual knowledge. In the study, three OAC mathematics students kept journals for six months, describing and commenting on their work in mathematics courses. Other data collected included the students' records, their responses to a questionnaire, taped interviews, the author-teacher's field notes, assignments, tests, and exams. Indicators of conceptual growth from the Writing to Learn Mathematics (WTLM) literature were used as benchmarks for each case to determine conceptual growth and its connections with WTLM activity. Further exploration of these indicators is needed to establish convincing theoretical links between conceptual growth and journal writing.
